Course Content: This course surveys the history and evolution of cinema in the twentieth century, emphasizing all aspects of the art form from period values to analysis of cinematic literature and performance. This course further emphasizes the analysis of the visual and aural aspects of selected motion pictures, the dramatic aspects of narrative films and historical growth and sociological effect of film as an art.

Course Objectives: Along with learning basic terminology for discussing a film in critical terms, the student will also use their analytical skills in writing to evaluate films. These evaluations should grow in depth as the student learns about the camera, scene construction, editing, sound, lighting, elements of meaning, narrative technique, and the business of the motion picture industry.

The two primary objectives of the course are; (1) to elevate the student's appreciation for motion pictures, and (2) to further enhance the student's expressive, communicative, and critical thinking skills through writing about films.

Methods of Instruction: Lectures, Full DVD viewing, special presentations, individual and group participation.
