

Off Campus Access

You may access periodical indexes or databases from any location, which makes completing homework and research assignments more convenient than ever.

Online databases and electronic journals subscribed to by Clarendon College and the Harrington Library Consortium are restricted, by the vendors, for use by current Clarendon College students, faculty and staff only.

Many online vendors control access by a range of computer IP addresses. Anyone coming from a library IP address gains access, but users are refused access if they are accessing from outside this IP address range.

Passwords for accessing the online databases are available from library staff, or in some cases, your instructor. Please contact us for this information.
